" Only those who are presumptuous and superficial can prescribe laws and aesthetics for the cinema starting from an incredible virginity of this Art. Dickens and the entire gallery of ancestors dating back to the Greeks and Shakespeare is a reminder that both Griffith and all the cinema does not draw its origin only by Edison but bases its narrative on a great cultural past"

Mc Luhan

Seven Myths / Seven Great Titles

Editorial project for the transformation, rewriting, adaptation of literary and theatrical material aimed at the production of quality audiovisual content.

Eizenstein defined cinema as the most advanced form of theater:

"Only presumptuous and superficial can prescribe laws and aesthetics for cinema starting from an unlikely virginity of this Art. Dickens and the whole gallery of ancestors dating back to the Greeks and Shakespeare serve to remind us that both Griffith and filmmaking do not derive solely from Edison but base their narration on a great cultural past."

THE MISSION

Bringing the talent of Italian authors, production designers, costume creators, directors, writers and screenwriters to the world.

Their ability to inhabit metaphors transforms the classic dramaturgical structure into new fabulae set in futuristic or contemporary contexts, becoming mainstream quality audiovisual content.
